The ship rocked violently. The waves crashed over the deck.

Did You Know?

At sea, a BBC film crew braved powerful waves and icy waters in the hope that they could film a population of harp seals in Antarctica. Despite the freezing temperatures and rough conditions, which damaged some of their equipment, they continued undeterred, showing remarkable resilience and teamwork. The dangerous journey highlighted their commitment to their profession and determination to show the wonders of the natural world to people around the world.

Number Challenge

A film crew spent 228 days filming harp seals, recording for 6.5 hours each day.

1) How many full weeks did they film?

2) How many total hours did they spend filming?

Critical Thinking

Do you think people are born with resilience, or do they learn it as they grow up?
